Canada's political storm is over. The smoke has passed off. The battle has been fought, and men breathe more free ly. Let us look a little at the result .am an elector of St. John's Ward, Toronto, and tried to get your very excellent member, Adam Witson, elected for West ern Toronto. Had justice taken placeif the electors had had fair play, we would have got him elected by a handsome majority. You, the quiet farmers of the country, know but little of the trouble of carrying on an election in the city. We have at the polls a low set of rowdies hired bullies, tavern keepers, cab drivers and a PARTIAL POLICE, to contend with. These push away quiet respectable men often assault them; and as they general ly understand their business, are preparel by numbers to put down resistance of the few respectable men who may be present. In St. John's Ward, the first day, and up to noon of the second, the Reformers polled as many, and cometimes more votes than the Tories. This, you will recollect, is in the most noisy Ward in the city. The fact is, that bad as is the name of this Ward, it contains a majority of Rates for the year of graco 1861, in North | Reformers, if they were allowed to pol their votes. corrupt men. (I, by no means, class al innkeepers with this set.) PRIESTLY INTERFERENCE has carried the Upper Canada elections. The Roman Catholics, with but few exceptions, i towns, cities and counties, voted like drilled soldiers, one way. In Peel they voted for the greatest supposed ENEMY they have, J. H. such conduct. Nor was this sort Priestly interference the only one. Church of England Priests in some places helped; but worse than all, the Methodist Priests indirectly, and in some places openly, persuaded the members of their churches to vote for men like Cameron Crawford, Robinson and others. They gave the "cold shoulder" to that party who for forty years in Upper Canada have fought their battles and rights. I believe, however, that whilst such conduct in some places effected the elections (especially in) Toronto), to the great injury of Reformers, generally Methodists voted as they thought proper. I cannot fully describe this matter now, but may herculter. Would you have thought that old Dr ROLPH actually took the trouble to go to the polls and vote for J. B. Robinson, in lien. Toronto. BT JAMES J. HUNTER JR, M.D. Pirst o'er thy lands, in sylvan strain, Pll try to skim o'er wood and plain,-Assume to view thy great expanse, Contracted to a bird's-eye glance; Thy fairy grove and silv'ty stream,

That heavenly visions all but seem,

When Sol's first rays thy bills adorn, And usher in the vernal horn. Then first on fancy's wing I soar, Where Hudson's briny brows roar, Or Cynthia from her silv's throne Lists to wild Nootka's dreary mosn; Or, if the fer'ring breeze avite To southern shores the Mec's flight Where four broad seas volutious lay, To guard an empire's might sway, And kiss the pebbly shores fround, Two thousand miles by weer bound. Where'er I rove the vast doanse, Mountain and plain, in digant glance, Rivers in sunlight sparkling flow, And forests dark majestic grow; Beauteons cities, cultured plains, Cots emiling, and contented swains, Bright vistas ever cheer the night,

And scatter every shade of night. Here Canada thy land extends-And thy great parent's power defends-A thousand miles of genial clime, From north to south they all are thine From east to west, two thousand more, Stretch gorgeously from shore to shore And prairie, forest, lake and stream, Alternate, like a poet's dream.

Europe's nations may seek in vain. Such boundless wealth from main to main Avaunt, foul ignorance !- nor dare Boast solar heat less here than there; Alone does cultivation make The only diff'rence in his wake-The only magic in his way, Whatever selfishness may say; German forests of Cresar's time, The trucst emblems form of thine.

Old Time has seen mistaken praise-Ignoble theme in poet's lays, When fabled graces flourished well Could sympathizing souls impel. Yet thine are real, persistent, true-Respected most, when most in view; Then know thyself, thy boundless power For fature good or evil hour. Kind Providence within thy land, Has placed a mighty magic wand, To rule, or be ruled, to be free As weak frail man, officarth can be; Or if ignoble passions have, To be thyself the shackled slave. Son of a noble, gallan race, Maintain thyself thy ofly place-Berere in justice, mold worth, Safe basis for thy gratter growth; Then industry shall flear thy way, Economy maintain by sway.

I view thee not a matal hour, But ages hence thy highty power-When the fleet Iron Horse shall roar, From Nootka Sound Labrador; When thy broad belt Il Commerce span And bear thy wealth b distant land; And millions shall find happy homes Where now the untared buffalo roams; When teeming cities, fillas fair, And all the arts of police are there; When college, school, and churches' spires All glitter in solstitid fires, And mountain, mine and spreading plain Diffuse their wealth from main to main And jarring races full in one, Rejoice in name CAM DIAN.

Let his'try's page do to thy view, The secrets of the rule g few; What arts can raise a nation's power, And safely guide through stormy hour When factions rage, subition foul And selfish passions tradly growl, And furies, summon'd from their shade, Call bleeding havor to their aid. When vice gives power, official rule, Countless millions to control, Repudiating honest debt, And fillibusters, too, beget Wide sympathies in public mind, Approving kindred spirits find-Then know the day of vengeance nigh Of man and righteous God on high When crime is feasted-fills high place And dirk and bowie-kuife displace Laws' functions-with surpassing grace! When savage hordes are hounded forth. From sunny south and frigid north. To distant lands, to rob and slay, For lust of power, and wealth and sway; Then Scylla, and Marius contend, And Casar's savage hosts descend From Alpino heights, to Rome's proud

And freedom's banner tatter'd falls. Presumptuous is the mortal man, That darest the Fates' decrees to scan; To rend the veil of ages past, Or grapple with the coming blast-Doomed like Cassandra to foresee, Yet never meet credulity. Yet sure the poet's eye can span, The coming destiny of man-The weeds of nations in decay, When truth and virtue fly away, More congenial realms to find, For the expansive, boundless mind. Then send, ye Gods, your fiercest bolts, To dash to earth the wretched dolts, Whose dark ambition dares to doom Fair freedom's high hopes to the tomb; Whose morbid passions lead to crime, As aids political to climb The slipp'ry dang'rous heights of power-T' invoke, invite the stormy hour, In hopes to ride the troubled sea When all is sunk in anarchy.

Now bear, ye Gods! O bear away, My muse demands more grateful lay, Where wholesome councils yet remain, And men still honor virtue's claim, To fairy grove, and sylvan stream, And Canada's exalted Queen-Where the free mind pursues its flight, Nor dreams of aught to quench its light Nor southern blood hounds flash their
